Boldly reinventing the rogue-like genre, GALAK-Z takes the well-worn RPG formula and gives it a makeover, then throws it in the deep end. You explore a series of dungeons, fight a slew of wandering monsters, and eventually forge a way through to the epic final boss. The main difference is that you lose all your weapons, armor, and gear at the end of each level, which makes combat more frantic and visceral than any other RPG you've played. GALAK-Z is a high-adrenaline, limb-twisting struggle, and there's no piddling around. You'll die a lot, and often multiple times, but the exhilaration is really worth it. Gameplay: You have no weapons, armor, or equipment, and you die several times a level. This is probably the most high-adrenaline, limb-twisting struggle ever. Combat is fast, fun, and an amazing number of enemies fly in from all directions. You have two weapons, one of which has a random elemental effect, and can only be used to pick up three items. You also can only carry one load of stuff, and that maxes out at about six items of any kind. You can get one item, but no more. Your items disappear when you die, which is often. You can replenish your supply of weapons, armor, and potions at your base. There are certain essential items that are easily replaced (like health potions), but you can't revive dead allies. GALAK-Z takes the high-adrenaline limb-twisting struggle and raises it to an art form, and it's a masterpiece. More Info: [Editor's note: Nearly four years later, I'm still playing and enjoying GALAK-Z's roguelike predecessor, POLTERGANGER. This strategy roguelike has been ported to Linux, and is cross-platform compatible. (On OS X, it would be too slow to run smoothly.) This time, I had been off doing actual stuff, so when GALAK-Z landed in the mail, I decided to check it out and see if it's still fun and the right combination of hardcore action and strategic thinking, and it is. Gameplay: GALAK-Z takes the roguelike genre in a new direction. You explore and die, then explore and die, and so on. Your character is determined by its weapon and spell
